AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT – GYTTE

This is the third article in a series about GYTTE. GYTTE (Give Ye Them To Eat) helps villagers and farmers with training and techniques to improve their land and increase production in south-central Mexico. This includes land terracing to control runoff, cover crops for erosion control and building up organic matter in the soil, irrigation efficiency, crop rotation, using organic fertilizers, installing structures to prevent erosion, drip irrigation to maximize water use, and more. These sustainable techniques have been field tested at the GYTTE demonstration farm at the Tree of Life Training Center near Tlancuapican, Mexico. By using these techniques, families can earn additional income by selling produce and other crops from their increased agricultural production. This in turn raises their standard of living and benefits the entire community. Tabernacle’s support of GYTTE through our annual Easter Offering ensures that this effort will continue. GYTTE is a social outreach project of the Methodist Church of Mexico to combat hunger and poverty in the rural sector. Next week – Livestock Development.
